Ideal for both active travellers and those who want pure relaxation, Noumea and the Isle of Pines is a wonderful place of great diversity of culture and colour – it's our must visit near neighbour in the Pacific Ocean.

Just a 3-hour flight from Sydney (less from Brisbane), New Caledonia is our closest Pacific neighbour. The country comprises of the main island (La Grande Terre) which is about 400km in length, and a myriad of smaller islands (the Loyalty Islands and Isle of Pines being the main two). It is a tropical getaway, but being a French territory it offers a French twist. French is the main language, and you will find exquisite pastries and French wine. It's not all French though – the local Melanesian people, the Kanaks, have been inhabitants for over 3,000 years making New Caledonia an interesting mixture of cultures, tastes and colours.

The islands themselves are very different. The east coast of La Grande Terre has tropical scenery, with mountain ranges covered in lush greenery, ferns and vibrant rainforest. The drive along the coast gives spectacular views of turquoise waters and white sand beaches. Further north there are more traditional Kanak villages, and perhaps the local people are more welcoming, as every person gives a friendly wave and a smile. Going into the centre of the main island you can discover natural springs, waterfalls and incredible views across the countryside down to the huge barrier reef lagoon surrounding the island. The west is more open with pine forests and paperbark trees, an ideal place for a walking holiday.

New Caledonia offers a variety of short day walks from the resorts (transfers can be arranged – at extra cost – to trailheads further away from the resorts). Follow tracks through the Blue River National Park or travel to the north of Yate, towards an area described as the 'Forgotten Coast', which, as the name suggests, offers wild seclusion with unique and relatively untouched forest clad valleys, cliffs and natural springs.

If you are looking for challenging walking or trekking – again with authentic and cultural encounters – walk the Great North track. This multi-day trek along a magnificent coastline and into the mountains takes you into traditional Kanak villages where you can meet and learn about the indigenous people and culture.

The GR NC1 walking trail (based on the French Grande Randonnée routes) crosses the southern province, starting out from Prony, at its southern edge. Over seven stages explore the red soil country - a rich red colour from the oxidized metal-rich earth - of the Great South region, its luxuriant forests, abundant wildlife and the Dumbéa River. Transfers to walking trails are available from both resorts at extra cost.
